Poetical.

IF WE KNEW.

If we knew the woe and heartache
Waiting for us down the road,
If our lips could taste the wormwood,
If our backs could feel the load,
Would we waste the day in wishing
For a time that ne'er can be?
Would we wait with such impattence
For our ships to come from sea?

If we knew the baby fingers,
Pressed against the window pane,
Would be cold and still to-morrow—
Never trouble us again—
Would the bright eyes of our darling
Catch the frown upon our brow?
Would the print of rosy fingers
Vex us then as they do now?

Ah, those quiet, ice-cold fingers,
How they point our memories back
To the hasty words and actions,
Strewn along our backward track!
How these little hands remind us,
As in snowy grace they lie,
Not to scatter thorns but roses,
For our reaping by and by.

Strange we never prize the music
Till the sweet-voiced bird has flown;
Strange that we should slight the violet
Till the lovely flowers have gone;
Strange that summer skies and sunshine
Never seem one-half so fair,
As when winter's snowy pinions
Shake the white down in the air.

Lips from which the seal of silence
None but God can roll away,
Never blossomed in such beauty
As adorns the mouth to-day;
And sweet words that freight our memory
With their beautiful perfume,
Come to us with sweetest accents
Through the portals of the tomb.

Let us gather up the sunbeams
Lying all around our path;
Let us keep the wheat and roses
Casting out the thorn and chaff;
Let us find our sweetest comfort
In the blessings of to-day,
With a patient hand removing
All the briars from our way.

Select Story.

NO HELP FOR IT.

The car was crowded; I saw that at the first glance. But weren't they always so at this time of night? and what good would it do if I waited for another? I signaled the driver; he stopped. I stepped on the platform, the gentlemen made way politely, and just then a gust of wind came along, rattled out hairpins, and away flew my curls far down the street. There was a titter of amusement from those who witnessed the catastrophe, and full of indignation and shame for the loss, I hurried inside. But the car hadn't gone more than a couple of streets when a gentleman entered, and without attracting notice quietly slipped into my hand the missing hair, loosely wrapped in a newspaper. I looked up gratefully and met a pair of eyes beaming with mischief and good humor. They were dark and so was his hair, and the face was bronzed, as if by travel and exposure. But I blushed and was vexed at his quizzical glance, and wished in my heart that he had been older, and not quite so good looking; for it wasn't the most romantic adventure in the world, and I could fancy how ridiculous I looked, with my hat perched on the top of a few little straggling, hay-colored wisps of hair. (I had weighed down my head with chignons, and frizzes, and braids and curls, and—fashion knows what—until baldness followed as a natural consequence.)

If it hadn't been for the lost hairpins I might have fastened on my curls, but so often as I tried it they slipped down from under my hat until finally I gave up the attempt. Unluckily, too, I had come out without a vail; it seemed as if fate meant to do her worst. You won't be surprised that, under such circumstances, I was heartily provoked when my "hero of the curls" persisted in hanging on to a strap directly in front of me. To be sure he didn't turn his eyes once in my direction after that first look, but I knew he was there, and it made me uncomfortable.

The crowd in the car thinned and there were only three persons left when we reached the end of the route. My 'hero' was one of the number. Papa's house stood a few rods distant and I fairly ran toward it, the wind blowing dust in my eyes and flapping my skirts in a way that was anything but graceful. I was all out of breath when I reached the gate. Cousin Mabel stood there, staring as if she thought me demented.

'Why, Fanny, is that you?' and she burst out laughing. Where is your hair?'

I rushed past her into the house. She followed. Then half laughing, half crying, I told her the story.

Mabel laughed at my discomfiture. Then, being generous and kind hearted, in spite of her teasing propensity, she dropped the subject.

'You can't guess, Fanny, who has come to town.' And she looked mysteriously. 'He was in Paris during the siege, escaped miraculously and reached town this morning; everybody delighted; Aunt Sue especially.

'Mabel, it isn't Horace Leigh?'

'But it is. And his mother gives a party two weeks from to-night in honor of his arrival. We are all invited.'

'I won't go.'

'But Aunt Sue has decided that you shall. She has selected your dress—a lovely peach-blossom silk. 'Twill be a triumph of art, for Mrs Moore is to make it, and everybody declares her taste exquisite.'

'My eyes brightened. What woman could resist such a temptation as that? I wasn't going to give up though, all in a minute.

'Mamma might have consulted me,' and I pouted a little. 'I'm not going to be forced on any man—least of all Mr. Leigh.'

'Certainly not,' retorted Mabel, smiling mischievously. 'But, Fanny, confess now, you wouldn't like that fortune to slip through your fingers.'

Yes, I would, rather than marry Horace Leigh.'

'What has set you against him so persistently? According to report, he is handsome, and dignified, and noble hearted.'

'I've heard all that, and more, too; but if he were perfection itself, it wouldn't make any difference to me. He is Horace Leigh, the man Uncle John meant me to marry; that is all I want to know.'

'You are incorrigible, Fanny.'

'May be so, but it isn't pleasant to have a stupid old will set out what your future is to be whom you are to marry, and the penalty of disobedience.

'How did your uncle ever come to make such a will?' questioned Mabel, curiously.

'That is more than I can tell. I've heard, though, that he was in love with Mrs. Leigh once. Horace was a favorite of his, too, but was only 12 years old when Uncle John died. I was 7.'

'But the fortune—what becomes of it if you refuse to marry Horace?'

'He will have all.'

'And if he refuses to marry you?'

'I shall have all.'

'Ah, yes, I see! What a funny will! That money is left to you both only on condition that you marry each other. But it is a snug little sum, and if I were you, Horace Leigh shouldn't enjoy it alone. When did you see him last?'

'Not since Uncle John died. We were the best friends then. But he went to college soon afterward, then to Germany, and has been traveling most of the time since.'

'Has he ever written to you?'

'Oh, yes, I used to answer his letters until I found out about the will. Then I stopped.'

'Silly girl!'

'You wouldn't like it any better than I. Why, knowing what he does, he is actually forced to make love to me whether he likes it or not, if he is a bit gallant.'

'No such thing. Let him sacrifice the fortune.'

'There it is. How can he ever make a disinterested wooer? I do wish he had stayed in France. Mamma and Mrs. Leigh are even worse than Uncle John. They are determined to marry us in spite of ourselves.'

'But couldn't you arrange it so as to divide the fortune, and each be independent of each other?'

'No; Uncle John forbids that expressly.'

'Well, Fanny, you'll have to accept your fate and a husband, too.'

'Not I. Haven't you ever found out that I had a will of my own?'

Mabel laughed, and replied emphatically, 'I should think I had.'

'Then why do you persist in disbelieving me when I tell you I won't marry Horace Leigh? I won't go to the party given in his honor, either. You can wear the peach blossom silk if you like; I shan't.'

I ran out of the room, slamming the door to vigorously.

My indignation subsided a little when I was combing my hair. (Its quieting to the nerves, probably.) Having finished the operation, and fastened on my curls, securely this time, I looked at myself in the glass complacently. Not that I am vain, but then it's pleasant to have bright eyes, a clear complexion, and gold-brown hair, even if the latter isn't nature's gift. If my 'hero of the curls' could have seen me now he'd be a convert to the wearing of false hair forever afterward. I sighed a little at thought of him, and wished that we'd meet under more favorable circumstances.

But I hadn't much time for reflection before the supper bell rang, and such a clang and clatter as it made was enough to drive me crazy. I ran down stairs, stopping up my ears.

Brother Joe was standing in the hall, with the bell in his hand, and just as I expected, swinging it back and forth with all his might. (He is 10 years old, and as full of mischief as he can be.)

'Did you hear it, Fanny?' said he. 'I meant you should.'

I snatched it out of his hand, carried it into the dining room, and took a seat at the table.

'Heard the news, Fanny?' said mamma. Of course I knew what she meant, but I pretended I didn't.

'No. What is it? Louis Napoleon recalled?'

'Not exactly,' and papa laughed. 'Put Horace Leigh in place of Louis Napoleon, then you have it.

'Yes, dear, he arrived this morning.' Mamma smiled in an ecstatic way.

'Who? Louis Napoleon?'

'That is a good one!' shouted Joe.' 'You are an ignoramus, Fanny. I know what the word means; the teacher told me yesterday. Do you?,

'Hush, Joe,' said mamma, sharply. Fanny is not so dull as she pretends, and knows well enough that I referred to Horace Leigh.'

Then they all began to talk about him in a eulogizing strain—papa, mamma, cousin Mabel, even Joe. I was heartily sick of the subject when I rose from the table.

The more I heard of Horace Leigh the greater was my reluctance to see him, the stronger my aversion to the marriage Uncle John had planned. But mamma was a woman of will, and the whole household was arrayed against me, and I should have to treat him civilly, of course, and there was no telling what might happen afterward.

That night I resolved on my own course of action. Let events develop what it was.

I went down stairs the next morning dressed in a traveling suit of gray linen. Mamma stared a little; so did Mabel.

'I am going to Yonkers by the morning train,' said I, sipping the coffee mamma handed. 'Shall be back to-morrow night.' (What a fib! It cost me a pang, for I'm old fashioned enough to speak the truth generally.)

'Without so much as saying, 'By your leave,'' burst out mamma, indignantly.

'But you told me I could go any day this week.'

'When?'

'Last Saturday. Millie Hunt asked you. The roses are all in bloom now; strawberries are plenty; it is just the time to make a country visit. I promised her I would come, too.'

'Well, then, you can go,' said she, rather ungraciously, 'and be sure that you come back to morrow night.'

'Yes, mamma,' and I hurried out of the room, wondering whether she would think me crazy if she knew what a wild project I had formed.

Five minutes afterwards I stood in the hall all ready for the journey. Papa and the carriage were at the door.

'Jump in, Fanny,' said he.

'And look out for your hair,' whispered Mabel. But I had already done so; 'twas fastened securely to my head.

We reached the station in good season.

Papa couldn't find me a seat at first; but finally a gentleman rose and offered me one. He had been occupying two, so there was nothing particularly unselfish in the act. I don't remember whether I took the trouble to thank him or not. Papa did for his manners after the 'old school' type, politely and courtly.

Then he kissed me, and said something kind and affectionate, and was gone.

My destination was Townley instead of Yonkers. I had an aunt there, a spinster, opposed to marriage on principle (so she averred), and it was under her protection I meant to place myself until I succeeded in convincing Mr. Leigh of my utter indifference,so far as he or the 'will' was concerned. But I didn't dare disclose this intention, and so made the journey to Yonkers a pretext for the longer one to her.

It wasn't until we left Yonkers far behind us that, hearing a newspaper rustle, I took a good look into the face of my companion. Imagine my surprise, my confusion, when I recognized in him the dark-eyed, sunburnt stranger to whom I owed the hair on my head—the knight I'd dubbed 'hero of the curls!' I'd been so taken up with myself that I had scarcely noticed him before, even when he had offered me a seat.

Magnetized, doubtless, by a prolonged stare, he raised his eyes suddenly. Thereupon I dropped mine.

'Wouldn't you like to look over the paper,' said he, courteously.

'Thank you,' and I accepted the paper, devoutly hoping that he wouldn't discover my identity with the forlorn damsal whose hair he had rescued.

But he did, for glancing up shyly I detected a faint smile lurking around the corner of his mouth and lighting up his eyes.

I put on at once an aspect of severe dignity.

Not another word was said by either of us until, having read the paper through, advertisements and all, I returned it.

Then, being of a social turn, probably, he tried to open a conversation, but the only reply I made was either a monasyllable 'Yes,' or 'No.'

In one of the pauses of conversation I dropped my handkerchief. He picked it up, saw my name in one corner, started, looked at me closely, then returned it with a faint smile of what seemed both amusement and annoyance creeping over his face.

'Then it is Miss Fannie Hartly whom I have the honor of addressing?' inquired he, politely.

I bowed somewhat coldly.

'I heard of you often from a mutual friend whom I met at Paris—Horace Leigh.

'Ah?' and I threw into the exclamation all the scorn and contempt that I felt.

'We left France together, embarked on the same vessel, traveled in company. You knew of his arrival, did you not?'

His eyes were bent on me searchingly.

I thought the question impertinent, but answered it, nevertheless, adding, somewhat bitterly, that 'I should never be left in ignorance of so important an event as that.'

'Certainly not. And pardon me for saying it, but I'm a little surprised at your leaving the city just now. Mr. Leigh and myself are intimate friends, and I am acquainted with the fact that you are to be his future wife.'

'Was there ever such presumption?

'Sir!' and my voice shook with suppressed wrath, 'rather than marry Horace Leigh, I'd leap from the window to the bottom of that ravine,' pointing to one that lay on the side of us with the air of a tragedienne.

He winced, almost as much as if I had struck him a blow.

'May I ask you why?'

'He has told you of the will?'

'Yes.'

'Isn't that enough to part us forever? What delicate-minded woman wouldn't shrink from being forced into marriage thus? We are to accept each other, or lose a fortune; love has nothing to do with the matter, lucre everything; how can I be sure of his disinterestedness, or he of mine? That stupid will has been the bugbear of my existence long enough; I've run away from it now, and from Horace Leigh, too—'

I stopped abruptly. Angered by what he had said, I had disclosed more than I intended, and was vexed at myself, remembering that he was a stranger and the friend of Mr. Leigh.

I checked the reply he was about to make.

'Let us drop the subject,' said, I, 'I'd rather not discuss it. 'Tis a personal affair, and'—I drew myself up with dignity and gave him a freezing look.

'One question first. Is it to the man himself you object?'

'Yes.'

'Why? Is it his disposition or temperament or personal appearance that you dislike?'

'I knew nothing of either.'

'Have you ever seen his photograph?'

'Yes, it is like you a little.' (In my heart I wished it was more so, and that Horace Leigh resembled his friend in other respects too, in that case I would not have objected to the conditions of Uncle John's will.)

I was surprised to see him show such confusion at this answer. 'Like me?' he stammered.

'Yes, there is a slight resemblance in the shape of the features and that is all. The expression is widely different. But, instead of one question, you have asked me four.'

'Have I? And yet you haven't told me why you are so prejudiced against my friend. It is a case similar to the one of 'Doctor Fell.'

I laughed and shook my head, but remained silent.

'What? Won't you give me an answer?'

'No.'

He couldn't hide his vexation, and I began to be a little distrustful, he was such a devoted champion of Mr. Leigh. What if he should betray me to the enemy. A sort of reserve crept into my manner; conversation flagged; the shadow of Horace Leigh fell athwart us. 'Twas in vain that he tried to lift or win me back to the old frank way of speaking, I was guarded, reticent.

Something happened to the engine, we were detained. And oh, with what a home sick feeling I looked out into the darkness. My heart was heavy as lead, and there was a great lump in my throat, and tears rolled down my face in spite of all I could do.

'Poor child!' whispered some one at my side.

At that I flushed up angrily.

'It will be 8 o'clock to-morrow before we reach Townley, continued the same voice. 'How will you pass the night?'

'As the rest do,' replied I, curtly.

He went into another seat, that I might have a better opportunity to rest.

Never did I pass such a long, tedious night. I was awake most of the time, for if by chance I fell into a nap, it was brief and unsatisfactory. I welcomed the morning gladly, and news that we were to breakfast at Townley; so did Mr. ——. Wasn't it strange that he hadn't told me his name yet?') I have a business appointment,' explained he, 'otherwise I shouldn't have minded the delay.'

'When do you return?' questioned I, now that we were going to part I could afford to be civil.

'I can't tell exactly, but within a week. And you?'

'It is uncertain. May be not for months.'

He looked at me strangely, 'What! are you so embittered against Mr. Leigh that you are willing to exile yourself on his account?'

I was full of wrath and consternation. Had I not forbidden him to mention hat name in my presence?

Just then we reached the station; people began to hurry past us; I turned to leave him without a word.

'Stay!' he continued in a low voice. I have not told you my name yet. Can you guess it?'

What did he mean? I raised my eyes, slowly scanned his face, and a faint conception of the truth dawned upon me.

Yes, the 'hero of the curls,' the genial traveling companion, was—

'Horace Leigh!' exclaimed he, laughing, 'the man from whom you thought to flee, but with whom you have run away.'

Although covered with confusion, I could not resist the contagion of his merriment.

Can you guess the sequel? Had we met under other circumstances we might have hated each other; as it was, we did the opposite.

The explanation that I gave Aunt Martha, however, of the causes that led to my visit was jumbled up sadly. But she welcomed me cordially and was very much disappointed when soon after my arrival, a letter arrived, demanding my immediate return home. It was in answer to one I had sent. But if mother had known that Horace Leigh was in Townley, she would have borne my absence with more equanimity.

I told her of it afterward; for of course he found it very convenient to accompany me home. I more than half suspected that his business was as much a ruse as my trip, and that he was only glad to seize on the sligtest pretext for getting away from me; for the 'will' found no more favor in his eyes than in mine; so great were our prejudices that if we had not become acquainted incognito the barrier that separated us would never have been crossed.

My unexpected 'trip' created quite a little commotion at home; but everything was forgotton when I returned safe and sound under the escort of Mr. Leigh.

One word as to the party. I wore the peach-blossomed silk, and a new set of curls, and 'looked like a princess,' mamma said. And some one else endorsed her verdict, adding, 'But you didn't the first time we met.'

I flushed with mortification.

'Such a chase as your bewitching eyes led me after those curls,' added he, 'and yet you scarcely rewarded me with a look. 'Twasn't exactly love at first sight,' and he laughed, 'but something like it, for when I met you the next morning, my

STATE TICKET.

SUPREME JUDGE,
GEORGE A. JENKS, Jefferson county.

AUDITOR GENERAL,
ROBERT P. DECHERT, Philadelphia.

An exchange curtley remarks: The Democratic Governor of New York allowed Tweed to die in the penitentiary, even after he had given up his property and made a confession. The Republican Governor of Pennsylvania pardoned Wm. H. Kemble before he got to the penitentiary, for fear he would make a confession.

There is a weekly paper published at Washington which purports to be an organ of the "Greenback" party. It is really a republican paper in disguise. It is supported and circulated by republicans. The matter it contains is carefully prepared with a view of injuring the democratic party with confiding and unsuspecting people. It is just such a National view as the republican managers are anxious shall be taken by democrats of "greenback" proclivities.

Now that the candidates for the different county offices are growing numerous, voters generally will be called upon and their influence and votes solicited. Do not promise the first man who approaches you on the subject, simply because he is the first. Wait until all the candidates are in the field and then give your support to the one whom you believe to be the most competent, and deserving. There must be no bolting this fall, and in order to prevent it let the nominees be solid Democrats, and the nominations be made fair and square, and without a suspicion of corrupt means.

STATE SENATOR.

A Williamsport correspondent of the Harrisburg Patriot has this to say about the State Senatorship:

"As to Senator, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the lamented George D Jackson, of Sullivan, there is a strong disposition to nominate Mr. Nathan B. Kimble, of Williamsport, for the place. He made one of the best members Lycoming ever had, and is deservedly popular with all parties. His name stands above reproach for honesty and integrity, and he would make an excellent Senator. Sullivan or Columbia will likely claim the nominee, but it is believed that if Mr. Kimble will consent to be a candidate, the popular feeling in his behalf is so strong that he would ride into the office on a genuine boom."

While the ability of Mr. Kimble is ununquestioned, the right of Lycoming to claim the next Senator is and will be very strongly contested. She had the office for the two terms immediately preceding Mr. Jackson's election, and while there are three other counties in the district, each with a democratic majority, it is not likely that the Senatorship will be conceded to Lycoming perpetually. We express no opinion at present as to which county should have it, but are fully satisfied that Lycoming should not.

STANDING COMMITTEE.

BLOOMSBURG, Pa. June 2, 1880.

MESSRS EDITORS:—

Now that the meeting of our standing committee is over, as well as the sessions of our State convention, it may not be amiss to call the attention of your Democratic readers to some propositions that should underlie, if they do not, our county delegate system.

At the outset let me say that our delegates to the State Convention—Col. J. G. Freeze and John M. Clark, esqs, were men who were eminently fit for the position and who could have been elected under any circumstances. I also believe that they properly represented in convention the wishes of the Democracy of this county. The old rule was for the Convention to select the chairman, and as I am informed he selected the Standing Committee, which was gradually enlarged from five to eleven, I have not the data by me to be exact. At any rate this one man Power was frequently abused, especially by the "bolt" in 1866, in the contest between Chalfant and Tate. To remedy this evil new rules were adopted, and among them was one providing that the Standing Committee should consist of one member from each election district and that they should be elected by the Democratic voters at the Delegate election. This salutary rule was intended to give the people rerepsentatives of their own choice, and it followed of course that there was a full representation of the minority.

But at the late meeting of the Standing Committee, despite protest, it was prostituted, and whilst no injury was done at that time, the precedent is fraught with danger for the future.

In the first place we do not believe there is any authority for any substitutions, certainly not in the rules. The members are elected, not appointed, and if for any reason the man chosen cannot attend, the power of substitution falls back to the people.

But granting that he has the power of substitution all reason and precedent show that his successor must come from the body which elected him. Otherwise our present rule is worse than the old one. At the last meeting blank substitutions were collected and the names filled in at the will of the holder. A number of these men resided in Bloomsburg, and possibly never set foot in the districts they pretended to represent. The same process might enable the whole to be represented by men living in Bloomsburg. On the same theory it would be easy for a man to go through the county and collect a majority if not all the substitutions and insert his own or any other name. This would be minority representation with a vengeance, but is unwarranted, and undemocratic. We want no one man power in this county.

It can readily be seen how easy it is to get these subtitutions. There is no pay connected with the position and many are loath to leave their business for a matter in which they may think they have no immediate concern. Others may act from motives of friendship, promises as to the future, pecuniary motives, or other inducements.

The next Convention should take hold of this question, and the people should elect those who are able and willing to serve, or if substitutions are to be made let it be by the people of the district, or of one from among their number. B.

The sermon of Rev. Thomas K. Beecher of Elmira was heard at Williamsport on Sunday last by telephone. The distance is seventy-eight miles.

The Republican says that "Dr. S. Y. Thompson of Danville was unable to go as a delegate to Chicago, W. J. Baldy went as a substitute." How does it come that a paper signed by twenty-two of the Pennsylvania delegation protesting against Grant's nomination contains the name of S. Y. Thompson instead of W. J. Baldy? The paper was drawn in Chicago on Tuesday.

Cadet Whittaker, the colored boy at West Point, who alleged that an outrage had been committed upon him in his room, by tying him, slitting his ears, and otherwise mutilating his person, an investigation of which charge has occupied several weeks at West Point, has been found guilty of committing the outrage upon himself. The motive is supposed to have been for the purpose of exciteing sympathy as he stood low in his class and was afraid he would not graduate. He has been placed under arrest, but still protests his innocence.

The supreme Court of Pennsylvania has recently rendered several important decisions of general interest in the matter of road taxes. The right of farmers to work out their road tax has been generally, if not universally, conceded, supervisors in a few townships insist that the tax must be paid in money A test case has been decided in favor of the tax payers, and their right to work out their taxes distinctly and finally affirmed. In other cases collectors of road taxes have claimed a commission on the taxes worked out, as well as that paid into the county treasury. The Supreme Court decides that all claims for such commissions should be rejected, the working out of the tax imposing no labor on the treasurer, but on the supervisor, who is fully paid for his services.

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

The Republican National convention met at Chicago on Tuesday. For several days previous the clans were gathering from all sections of the country, and the crowd of Imperialists, anti-third termers, Shermanites, Bisinites, and others was immense. The Grant party was headed by Senator Conkling and Don Cameron, the chairman of the national committee. A meeting of this committee was held on Monday and Cameron showed a disposition to take the bit in his mouth and run things pretty much his own way. This did not suit a large number of members, and loud threats were made that if Cameron insisted on enforcing the unit rule in the convention he would be deposed as chairman, and a more conservative man put in his place. Cameron expressed the utmost confidence in the nomination of Grant, with or without the unit rule, but as the fight waxed hotter the strength of the opposition became more and more apparent. Notwithstanding the fact that the New York convention declared in favor of the unit rule, twenty-two delegates from that State signed the following protest:

The undersigned delegates to the Republican National Convention, representing our several Congressional districts in the State of New York, desiring above all the success of the Republican party at the approaching election and realizing the hazard attending an injudicious nomination, declare our purpose to resist the nomination of General U. S. Grant by all honorable means. We are sincere in the conviction that in New York at least his nomination would ensure defeat. We have a great battle to fight, and victory is within our reach, but we earnestly protest against entering the contest with a nomination which we regard as unwise and perilous.

That Blaine is the choice of a large majority of the republican party cannot be doubted, and that Cameron and the other machine managers went to Chicago to defeat the will of their party by nominating Grant, is just as certain. They wanted a "strong candidate" which simply means a man who has the audacity to attempt to have himself inaugurated whether he should be elected or not.

Judge Hoar was made temporary chairman by a compromise, and it was agreed that the unit rule should be left to a vote of the Convention.

Up to the time of going to press (Thursday) no news has been received of a nomination It looks now as though it would be neither Blaine nor Grant. Edmond's chance seems to be brightening. It makes but little difference who the republican candidate may be, the next President will be named by the Democratic Convention at Cincinnati.

Indians at Carlisle.

Spotted Tail, Red Cloud, American Horse and White Thunder and other chiefs, on a visit to the Indian school at the old barracks, were highly delighted with the management of the institution, except in one particular—the rule providing for the punishment of serious misbehavior by imprisonment in the guard house being distasteful to them.

The meeting of the chiefs who have children in the school with their offspring was very affecting. Two Strike, who has two boys in the institution, and Spotted Tail, who has four boys and one girl there, warmly embraced their children and shed tears of joy. The chiefs were conducted through the several school departments and gave the exercises the closest attention.

Subsequently Spotted Tail made an earnest speech in the chancel in the presence of the other visiting Indians and a number of whites. He complimented the management of the school, except its military feature, remarking that the children had been sent there to be educated, and not to have them converted into soldiers.

He complained that some of the boys who were too young to have hearts had been put into the guard house. Captain Pratt, who has charge of the school, demanded the names of the pupils so treated, and Spotted Tail reluctantly replied that one of his sons had been treated in that manner. After being told there was no military significance in the blue uniforms and drilling exercises his feelings were much mollified, but he insisted that the guard house punishment was not founded on humane principles. Other boys have been committed to the guard house, but only after a court of their fellows had adjudged them deserving of the treatment.

The visiting Indians were conducted through the various workshops connected with the school.

Spotted Tail and Red Cloud sent congratulatory telegrams to their friends in Dakota Territory.

On Thursday evening interesting ceremonies were held in the chapel of the school, Right Rev. M. A. DeWolf Howe, Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church for the Diocese of Central Pennsylvania, assisted by Rev. Dr. Leverett, of Carlisle, performed the rite of confirmation over twelve Indian children, eight boys and four girls. The services were very impressive and were attended by all the visiting chieftains. The visitors remained at the school over Sunday.

Why Were They Pardoned.

The reasons for the pardon of Kemble, the legislative briber, are gradually coming to light. It is stated that Kemble's contribution to the Hoyt campaign of 1878 was ten thousand dollars. It is said on good authority. Besides this, it is alleged that he allowed the Chairman of the State Committee to overdraw his committee account with the People's Bank to the extent of thirty thousand dollars. It is in the nature of man to be grateful, and there are better reasons for Kemble's pardon than the little legal screen Attorney General Palmer put forth. Some of these reasons are best known to Cameron, who is the arch-conspirator. Kemble is only a satellite. Above and beyond him are the true offenders. Villainy has its day everywhere, and it will have it in this State. Some rich develpments will then be made.—Mauch Chunk Democrat.

It is believed that there will not be a quorum in the House of Representatives at Washington this week, owing to the hegira of Republican members to Chicago. It was difficult to drum up a quorum last week and since then the number of absentees has greatly increased. Most of the Republican members who have gone to Chicago have secured pairs. In some instances it is stipulated that the pairs are not too hold good if the votes of the members present who are paired should become necessary to show a quorum. But in many cases the pairs are absolute. Members of Congress have no business to leave their posts of duty for the purpose of attending political conventions. It is to hoped that the Democrats in Congress will not imitate the bad example set by the republicans. Let them remain in their places and attend to the public business. There is statesmanship sufficient outside of congress to nominate a presidential ticket.—Patriot.

A Sunday Cyclone.

The most destructive wind and storm experienced in the Muncy valley for many year, passed through a part of Muncy Creek township Sunday evening about 9 o'clock. The destruction resulted from the meeting of two storms between Clarkstown and Muncy, one coming from the south and the other from the west. The damage done was very heavy. The following particulars of some of the losses have been obtained: The large barn of John Beeber (miller) was leveled with the ground, two valuable horses and three cows killed, wagons broken etc. The barns of George Watt and William Beeber were also destroyed, and the large and valuable barns owned by Amos Shipman and Jacob F. Hill were unroofed and otherwise damaged. Mr. Hill was engaged in putting away his wagons, when the roof was wrested from his barn and carried about 200 yards. His fruit trees were also destroyed. Thomas J. Opp, Jacob Whitmoyer, Francis Beeber, and others suffered considerable loss to buildings. The fine grove of Mr. George Bieber about a mile and a half from Muncy, near Trump's mill, was about all blown down. It contained some fine timber and the loss will be considerable.

Much destruction of trees, fences, etc., in the vicinity of Muncy was wrought.

The storm only covered a narrow track in destructive force, but its course is marked by destroyed and damaged buildings, fallen timber, uprooted orchards and prostrated fences. The wind was accompanied by a torrent of rain, the most vivid lightning and terrific peals of thunder. The district visited is one the finest parts of Muncy Creek valley, and the loss will be many thousands of dollars.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C. May. 27th 1880.

Fillibustering was the order of the day in both Houses of Congress yesterday, the republican minority in the Senate on the passage of the new electoral rule, and the anti-adjournment party in the House. After a spirited debate, and the non concurrence in numerous amendments, the joint rule passed the Senate by a vote of 25 to 15. It is to be hoped that Congress will not adjourn until both Houses concur in the joint rule. There is not a more important and imperative duty devolving on them than the establishment of some rule for counting the votes of Electors of President and Vice-President. The coming election will be a most exciting one. The minds of the entire nation will be wrought up to a high state of partizan feeling, the memory of the crime of 1876-7 will add to the animosity that will be engendered. Before the furious war of words is inaugurated Congress should see to it that every precaution and available means is taken against ending in another and more severe mode of warfare. No sane man is or should be willing to take the awful risk which was taken in 1877. There, a civil war was imminent one in comparison to which the late war would have been but a drop in the bucket, and it surely would have been inaugurated carrying devastation and ruin into every village and hamlet throughout the land had it not been for the patriotic forbearance of the Democratic party. The electoral Commission was bound it would not inquire into fraudulent returns—It accepted them steeped in all manners of iniquities and stole the votes of two states in order to seat in the Presidential chair a fraud. The people at large want no more electoral commissions. Upon another such a trial forbearance would cease to be a virtue.

The joint rule reported by Senator Morgan provides for an orderly, dignified and equitable count of the votes—When objections are made to returns or alleged returns the two Houses are to separate, and one hour is to be allowed for the determination of each disputed case.

If but one list of votes of electors from any states has been submitted to each House for its decision and it shall appear that the Houses have not concurred in rejecting said list, such votes shall not be counted—if more than one list of votes of electors from any one State, or paper purporting to be such list has been submitted to each House for its decision upon objections made thereto, and it shall appear that the Houses have not concurred in receiving such list they shall each be declared by the President of the Senate, in the presence of the Senate and the House of Representatives, as being rejected. And no list of votes of the electors so rejected shall afterwards be read in the presence of the two Houses except for information. It further provides a careful and circumspect mame for all the details of the joint convention and its proceeding to the announcement of the final result.

I fail to see the ground upon which the Republicans base their objections, unless it is that they wish to enact the proceedings of 1876-7.

The House in the Committee of the whole is hard at work on the sundry Civil Appropriation Bill.

It is now generally conceded that Congress in justice to itself and the country cannot adjourn before the middle of June as many important bills are now pending that require prompt attention.

HILTON.

LONDON LETTER.

LONDON, England, May 19, 1880.

SOCIETY AND BEEF.

We are treading close upon the heels of the London season. What, then, are the prospects for trade and pleasure during the coming months, when the metropolis will be turned into one huge fair, the streets crowded, the roadways blocked with carriages, the daytime almost too brief for the fulfillment of innumerable engagements, night literally turned into day, and society hurrying to and fro between dinner party and ball, cricket match and flower show, park and opera, afternoon reception and French play? The most confirmed grumbler can scarcely look with jaundiced eyes on the summer programme that is already issuing. On all sides there are signs of encouragement and promise. The youthful are cheerfully determined to face the fatigues of society, and the middle aged follow their lead. The Prince and Princess of Wales with their popular boys, safe and sound from their sea trip, are prepared as ever, to devote themselves to the service of the public, and will be found wherever there is a good work to be inaugurated or a deserving charity to be encouraged. Philanthrophy, science and literature, music and the drama—none of these things will be neglected by the Heir to the Throne of England, whose most genial countenance will certainly be seen wherever his presence can promote what is useful, and wherever his assistance is requisite for the better development of manly sports and exercises. Meanwhile, political antagonism and doubt are at an end. The new Parliament will soon have settled down, and the business of the Session got into good working order. New brooms will do their utmost to sweep clean; work and play will be cheerfully alternated; and, as there is a vast amount of labor to be accomplished, in order that promises may be duly fulfilled, there is every prospect of a busy Session, which means a season protracted far into the sultry days of summer.

Notwithstanding the severe prohibitory regulations that restrict the traffic, the importation of cattle from foreign countries has of late gone on increasing. In 1878 the number of foreign animals landed at the six privileged ports was 1,200,423. In 1879 it was 1,241,847; and if, as most people expect, trade continues to improve and wages rise, the import will, of course, grow rather than fall off. The fact that some 15,000 cattle are killed every week at the Debtford landing-place ought to indicate that not only is the foreign cattle trade a large one, but that the regulations enforcing slaughter at the port of debarkation must seriously raise the price of beef. It may thus come to a grave question whether it would not be possible to relax the restrictions now placed upon importation of cattle from the United States. There is no virulent type of disease ranging in that country. No case of plague can be discovered within its frontiers; and, although sometimes cattle from American ports show symptoms of pleuro pneumonia when they are landed, yet it must be borne in mind that when brought over alive they are exposed to weather of the worst sort and deprived of exercise in captivity. The strongest and healthiest animals, in such cases, may contract pulmonary diseases, but, for all that, it may very well be that no pleuro pneumonia was among them when they were put on board ship. If this is the case—and there is good scientific authority for saying that it is so—Mr. Mundella should set about making the foreign cattle trade as free as is compatible with general safety. He should put America on the same footing as Spain and Portugal.

Counterfeiters in Reading.

On Tuesday last, Capt. R. J. Linden, the well-known detective, accompanied by three of Pinkerton's men, arrived in this city, and immediately posted themselves about the principal hotels and cigar stores in the city. From their movements it was evident that they were after big game. Yesterday afternoon, as the four o'clock train was about leaving for New York, three well-dressed men, each carrying a valise, arrived at the depot and purchased tickets for New York. They were about taking passage on the train when they were surrounded by Captain Linden and his detectives and taken before Alderman Graul, who had issued a warrant for their arrest. Upon their arrival at the alderman's office, their valises were searched, and found to contain $7,700 in counterfeit $5 and $10 Philadelphia and Reading railroad scrip. The men arrested were Edward Hall, a notorious New York forger, who issued the scrip; Mike Walsh, a noted cracksman, who served a term of five years in the eastern penitentiary for robbing a bank at Wellsboro, this State, and Robert White, another noted New York criminal. After a hearing before the alderman they were taken to the county prison. The bogus scrip is exceedingly well executed, the signatures of Franklin B. Gowen and S. E. Bradford, the treasurer, being perfect. The scrip was in packages of $500 each. Pinkerton's detective agency, at Philadelphia, had received information some weeks ago which led them to believe that bogus scrip was being manufactured and circulated, and the detectives have been shadowing Hall, day and night, having arrived in Reading on the train immediately following the counterfeiters. The men found some difficulty in disposing of their scrip, and concluded to distribute it along the line. It is understood that they have some confederates in this city, who are also known to the officers.—Reading News.

A Combination Ticket in Maine.

BANGOR, June 1.—The Greenback State convention met to-day with 667 delegates present, instructed its delegates to Chicago to vote for the nomination of Solon Chase for President, passed the usual resolutions and nominated Hon Harris M. THE COLUMBIAN.

BLOOMSBURG, FRIDAY, JUNE 4, 1880

Mr. G. W. Mauger has recently refitted the Railroad hotel at Berwick.

I. S. Kuhn is building a new stable at the Central Hotel.

M. Wynkoop is visiting his parents in the western part of the state.

The Commissioners of Lackawanna county are preparing to build a new jail.

Dr. W. M. Reber is in New York attending a Medical Convention.

Dr. D. W. Conner's professional card appears in another column.

Owing to his large and increasing home practice, Dr. W. H. House has discontinued his dental office at Catawissa.

A visitor came to the house of J. F. Peacock on Tuesday. It was a young lady, in fact a very young lady.

Dr. E. W. Rutter is making a wide reputation at Berwick as a careful and skillful physician.

The St. Charles Hotel at Berwick, is a well kept house, under the management of Mrs. H H. Wester.

The plank sidewalks on several streets in town are becoming somewhat dilapidated. That in front of the Presbyterian church is particularly bad, and ought to be repaired.

The council of the Lutheran church have donated $25 to help rebuild the Lutheran church at Milton. To this William Krickbaum added $25 more.

The report of the proceedings of the Sunday School Convention was handed us too late for insertion this week. It will appear in next issue.

The City Hotel Barber Shop has been removed to the Exchange shop and both consolidated. Mr. Delzel will at once secure another workman and keep two chairs in operation.

A steamer for the use of the officers of the canal company is being constructed at the Espy boat yard. This is the third steamer that has been built there.

The new foundry of S. M. Hess is fast approaching completion. The building is about finished now, and some of the machinery is on the grounds.

Considerable damage was done in the store of H. J. Clark & Son last Saturday night by the overflowing of a tank in Snyder's gallery on the third floor. A lot of calicoes and other goods were wet.

The Berwick Water company is putting down a four inch pipe on Main street in that place. Not liking the mounds, they hauled away the surface earth, and as a natural result had a trench about a foot deep to fill up after the recent rains.

Rohr McHenry, of Benton, has 1,200,000 feet of white pine and hemlock lumber; 200,000 pine sawed shingles, and 250,000 pine shaved shingles. He is also prepared to cut bill stuff at short notice. Any one in need of lumber should call upon him.

A man named John Hoffman, was brought before Esquire Maize last Tuesday afternoon, on a charge of stealing seventy-five dollars from G. M. Lockard. After a hearing he was bound over in the sum of $200 to appear at next court. Sufficient bail not being offered he was committed to jail.

The subscription books of the Independent Weekly were not lost in the Millen fire, as has been reported, and as soon as W. H. Smith, the editor, can get things in shape, the paper will be sent out again. He lost everything else in the office, and if any of his friends in this county will render him some assistance, he will be very grateful. Give him a start.

The Wheeler No. 6 has taken the lead the last five years the world over, as the most perfect combined Reaper and Mower. For strength, durability, ease of management and excellence of work, either reaping or mowing, it cannot be beaten. Wm. Parsel, Bloomsburg says he is more than pleased with his No. 6. june 4-5w

Rev. Walter E Krebs, Pastor of the Reformed church, of this place, has resigned his charge on account of the failure of his health, and removed with his family to Littlestown, Pa where he expects to rest for a time from all mental labor for his restoration to health.

We are grateful to our friends throughout the county who are giving us valuable assistance in increasing our subscription list. Good names are coming in from all directions. Five new ones at Espy were added one day recently, and nine from Berwick on Tuesday.

Stafford's Commercial Ink is a Bright Fluid, which changes in a few hours to a deep and permanent black. Its greatest merit is that it never loses its beautiful blue color while in use but retains it to the last drop. It is more limpid than the thinnest fluid, but will not drop from the pen. It contains no gum and cannot thicken, and it will not mould. Try it. For sale by G. A. Clark.

Mr. P. E. Bomboy, of Espy, has invented a very useful article in the shape of a combination piano stool and Christmas tree holder. By simply loosening a screw the stool is removed and a standard for the tree is left. The stool can be used in offices as well as at the piano, having a telescope arrangement by which it can be raised or lowered. There will be a large demand for it as soon as it is put in the market. Mr. Bomboy has applied for a patent.

Osborne No. 8 Light Reaper weighs 750 lbs., runs very light, has perfect tilting apparatus, Kirby's celebrated rolling head rakes (acknowledged to be the best self-rake ever invented) perfectly controllable, and has no springs to get out of order—consequently is the most durable and light reaper in the market. june 4-5w

The heavy fall of rain on Saturday and Sunday was a blessing to the crops and cisterns, but it has seriously damaged the prospects of that injunction case against the Water company. In some places the earth has sunk below the surface, and dirt has been hauled to fill the holes. If the injunction had been granted as asked for, requiring the mounds to be leveled, it would have cost the town hundreds of dollars to haul earth back again to fill the trenches after they were done settling.

DECORATION DAY AT ESPY.

The ceremonies of Decoration day were participated in by the Odd Fellows, Sunday schools, and citizens generally, at Espy. The procession formed between nine and ten o'clock in the morning and marched to the cemetery, where the graves of thirteen fallen heroes were covered with flowers. The Espy and Afton bands furnished good music for the occasion. These bands are composed of young men, and are progressing nicely, the former under the leadership of J. M. Lehman, and the latter led by Douglas White. After the exercises were over, Esquire Worman furnished some very stirring martial music on the fife, with drum accompaniment at Miller's hotel. In the afternoon there was a picnic at the glen.

D. M. Osborne & Co., the celebrated manufacturers of Reapers, Mowers and Self-binders at Auburn, N. Y., sold six thousand "Osborne self-binders" last year. They have several acres of shops, employ 1,000 skilled workmen, and turn out one hundred and twenty-five machines every day. june 4-5w

The cow organ, of last week, quoted some law on members of corporations, for the purpose of showing that Mr. Holmes must resign from the Town Council because he is a stock holder in the Water company. The party who does the legal writing for that sheet ought not to make himself ridiculous by printing such nonsense. Any student can interpret the law better than that.

"The Classical Choir" is the title of a collection of sacred music composed and arranged by James C. Beckel, S. W. corner 11th and Market streets, Philadelphia, in five volumes. Vol. I contains Oratorios and Cantatas, Vol. II, Anthems and Choruses, Vol. III, Quartettes, &c, Vol. IV., Chants, Sentences, Psalms and Hymns and Vol. V. Voluntaries. It is an excellent collection.

AGAIN HE COMES.

Mr. Henry G. Vennor comes forward again with his direful prophecies of storms, heat, cold, &c. His letter is dated at Montreal, May 18th, and in it he says: "I believe that June will be an intensely hot month, on the whole, but the end of the present month and probably the first of June, will be fall-like with frosts again. July will be a terrible month for storms with terms of intense heat, but another fall-like relapse, with frosts, will in all likelihood occur a few days before the 20th. I fear the storms of thunder and hail will be of unusual severity during July. I must claim the verification of my prediction relative to a cold wave with frosts, over a portion of the United States between the 10th and 15th of May."

Messrs. David Herbert, Manager, and J. C. Townsend, General Agent for D. M. Osborne & Co., visited Milton last week and made a handsome donation in cash to John S. Lawson, who has been agent for D. M. Osborne & Co for twenty years and was burned out, losing his entire machine shops, foundry, valuable patterns and machinery. They will also send him a new stock of Osborne reapers and mowers and a full line of repairs.

Two bottles of the Great Mexican Remedy, Herbaline Bitters, cured me of dyspepsia and liver complaint, of ten years standing. U. D. Beard, Beard's Landing, Ky.

PAYING SCHOOL WARRANTS.

State Treasurer Butler has determined to honor all school warrants as fast as they are presented for payment numbered from one to a thousand. As the school boards make their reports to the Superintendent of Public Instruction, warrants are drawn in their favor for the amounts due them and numbered in the order of the reception of the reports. The method offers a premium to prompt reports. The appropriation to schools is $1,000,000 a year, and of the amount appropriated for 1879 it is proposed to pay about $450,000 before stopping. The county superintendents and certain pupils in the State Normal Schools have received nearly $100,000 of the annual appropriation.—Patriot.

Rev. Bishop Gilmour, of Cleveland, Ohio, has used the Great German Remedy, St. Jacob's Oil, and endorsed it highly. He writes about it as follows: I am pleased to say that the use of St. Jacob's Oil has benefitted me greatly, and I have no hesitation to recommend it to all as an excellent curative.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS.—While an application was being made recently in court at Pottsville for the release of a young man from prison under the insolvent laws, the court remarked that some legislation was needed in these cases. It seems very harsh that young men should be permitted to seduce young women and then escape the support of their children and the expense to which their victims are put by their crimes; after a brief imprisonment, as is the case under existing laws. There should be some redress for the innocent child at least.

HAVE YOUR TITLE PAPERS RECORDED.

Many people are under the impression that a bureau drawer is a safe place to keep their deeds, and that nothing is gained by having such papers properly recorded. At the recent fire in Milton a great many papers were lost, and it is probable that there will be some difficulty about boundary lines where owners of property had failed to put their deeds on record. Care in this matter not only prevents the loss of deeds, but very often prevents expensive litigation on questions of title. It costs but little to enter them on the record. If you have any unrecorded deeds the sooner you attend to this matter the better.

BUCKHORN NEWS.

BUCKHORN, May 31, 1880.

EDS. COLUMBIAN:

Nothing unusual has occurred since my last to mar the peace and quiet of this little village. The M. E. Sunday school observed last Saboath as the Centennial of Sunday schools; it being one hundred years since Robert Raikes started the first Sunday school in Gloucester City, England, a splendid wreathe, as a tribute to the late soldiers, being conspicuously placed on the pulpit.

Mr. Daniel Neihart who has been very sick is slowly recovering.

Dr. Lenker was absent attending the Medical Convention at Altoona.

Our band has been reorganized with the addition of several new members, and on Saturday evening gave us some street music. We are glad to see this step, for they are a jolly set of fellows, and music is their fort.

Mr. Frank P. Harris, of Hamburg, Pa., is visiting his many friends in this place. We think he intends staying a while; for his trunk, among other things, contained two cornets and a violin.

The band intend holding a festival on Saturday evening, June 12, when we presume the above named instruments will be made use of.

I.

DECORATION DAY.

There was quite a demonstration here last Saturday. At three o'clock in the afternoon a procession was formed on Market Square, in the following order. Bloomsburg Cornet Band, W. H. Ent Post, G. A. R., Afton Cornet Band, Friendship Fire Company, Rescue Hook & Ladder Company, Literary Societies of the Normal School, Sunday school children and citizens. The line of march was up Main to East, out East to T. ird, down Third to Market, up Market to Rock, out Rock to the Cemetery, from the Cemetery to the Court House, where the ranks were broken. Sheriff U. H. Ent, T. J. Vandersloe, and W. H. Abbott were the marshals, and conducted the procession in good military style. At the Court House the Rev. A. Britain delivered an appropriate address, and a prayer was made by Rev. D. J. Waller, jr. The decoration of graves was more profuse than ever before, almost every one in the cemetery having a bouquet upon it, presenting a very beautiful appearance.

It would be well if the graves of the soldiers in Rosemont should receive a little attention oftener than once a year. The plot should be laid out in better shape, and newly sodded. The graves now are crooked and uneven.

OSBORNE No 3 REAPER, wide-cut, weighs 900 lbs, is the old stand-by-machine for farmers having large and heavy harvests to reap. You can always depend upon it—wet or dry, tall or short, thick or thin. A. B. Croop, Briarcreek, says his No. 3 is the boss of all the machines he ever saw. One team works all day in the warmest weather and does not mind it a bit. His 13 year old daughter did all the reaping after the first half day. Try them—buy them—and be happy. june 4-5w

The Journal this week publishes a list of names of signers of petitions for licenses of hotels, and restaurants, and the bondsmen in this town. As a piece of news we surmise that this will not be of any peculiar interest to the public, and it is not likely that it will in any way affect the persons named except to make them feel that people with one idea often resort to very foolish methods to accomplish a good end. The object of this publication, we presume, is to prevent persons from signing such petitions hereafter through fear of getting their names in the paper. It will probably have just as much effect on the signers as a threat to publish the names of the Judges would have on the granting of the licenses. There is a right way and a wrong away to do everything. Such a course as is calculated to make enemies instead of friends for the temperance cause is hardly the proper way to promote that cause. We favor temperance in all things. Bad judgment is sometimes as disastrous in its results as bad whiskey.

Physicians freely prescribe the new Food Medicine, "Malt Bitters," because more nourishing, strengthening and purifying than all other forms of malt or medicine, while free from the objections urged against malt liquors. june 4-4w

The angler's theory that a fish does not suffer much physical pain from a hook in its gills, or mental agony either, from that matter is supported by the recent experience of a Stratford, Conn., fisherman. A large trout tore two hooks in quick succession from the line, and was finally pulled out on the third, with the first two hooks in his stomach.

"LONDON PURPLE"
Is the safest, best and cheapest material ever used for the destruction of the Potato Bug, Cotton Worm and Canker Worm, and has become the recognized poison for the extermination of these fearful plagues.

It was first introduced in 1877, since which time it has received the most unqualified support of all the leading agriculturists throughout the United States.

It has been carefully analyzed and recommended by the U. S. Agricultural Department at Washington, by the U. S. Entomological Commission, and by the Professors of the State Colleges.

It was sold in large quantitities throughout all the district where offered in 1879, and in every case where properly applied gave unbounded satisfaction, destroying not only the larvæ, but also the winged insect, and leaving the vines both clean and healthy.

It costs much less than Paris Green, and goes nearly three times as far. For sale by Moyer Bros., Bloomsburg, at wholesale and retail.

Dr. J. Schuyler, many years a Dyspeptic and suffering greatly with Neuralgia, Rheumatism and constipation, getting relief through an accidental discovery of a substitute for calomel, without its debilitating effects, prescribes the same for others, varying to suit each case with gratifying results. Among many who have received the benefits of his treatment, the following bear testimony, as follows:

BLOOMSBURG, PA., April, 1880

DR. SCHUYLER. Dear Sir:—I suffered greatly with Dyspepsia for a long time. My food after eating would burn and annoy me, depressing my spirits, making me miserable indeed. I became weakened down that I could not work at my trade (sadler) I tried various remedies recommended by physicians and friends but none of them did me any good until I placed myself under your treatment when I began to improve and have continued getting better until the present time. I now feel like a new man and can work every day with cheerfulness.

JOHN CHRISTMAN

BLOOMSBURG, PA., April, 1880

DR. J. SCHUYLER. Dear Sir:—For several months I have suffered with difficulty in breathing and fullness about the stomach. Two physicians pronounced my case one of "heart disease" for which I took Digitalis at their suggestion as the only medicine that could possibly do me any good. When you told me it was only sympathetic of the stomach by bad digestion, I felt encouraged and after being under your treatment for a few days the symptoms of "heart-disease" all left me and I felt like a new man, and have continued quite well ever since.

JAMES V. FERGUSON.

BLOOMSBURG, PA., March, 1880

DR. J. SCHUYLER, Dear Sir:—I can testify to the value of your treatment for rheumatism. I suffered severely and for a long time, and used various remedies, but all in vain, until you commenced treating my case. The pain from the hip to the knee (sciatica) which was very severe, passed off in one week's time leaving me free from pain, except some shifting pains in the limbs, but by continuing the use of your medicines they have all passed away that I now feel quite well again.

JOHN STINER.

MILLVILLE, PA., April 1880.

DR. J. SCHUYLER Dear Sir:—The medicine you sent me did me more good than any I ever tried before. I am very glad that others who had got relief from your treatment advised me to give you a trial for I had suffered from dyspepsia for a long time.

MRS HARRIET JOHNSON

MORDANSVILLE Col. Co., Pa., April 1880.

DR. J. SCHUYLER. Dear Sir:—I am pleased to give my testimony to the value of your treatment in Dyspepsia. I had suffered greatly with distressing burnings and retchings in the stomach, from which I failed to get any relief until I placed myself under your treatment, when I commenced to get better and continued to improve until I feel entirely restored.

COSTS IN ROAD VIEWS.

It might be well to bear in mind the law as laid down in the following opinion of Judge Elwell on the subject of costs in reviews and all subsequent views of roads. Those who sign petitions for such views should be careful to secure the costs in advance.

Supplee vs. Johnson et. al. } Case submitted to the court.

OPINION.

The defendants were the petitioners for the re-review of a road in the laying out of which the services of the plaintiff were rendered as a surveyor. It is agreed by the parties that these services were worth the amount stated in the claim of the plaintiff. The question to be determined is whether the petitioners for a review or for a third or other view are liable for the expense attending such view?

The question is answered by the express provisions of the Act of 13 June, 1836. By the 54th section it is enacted, that, "The expenses of views of private roads, and the expense of any reviews, or of any view subsequent to a review of a private or public road shall be wholly paid by the parties applying for the same." And by the 60th section of the same Act it is provided that "Reviewers and viewers upon a third or any subsequent view, shall be entitled each to receive compensation from the persons at whose instance they were appointed, for every day by them necessarily employed in such service." Digest 1283-4, pl. 88 and 94.

And by the 58th section of the same Act it is provided that "In all cases of a view or review or of any view subsequent to a review of a road a surveyor shall be found and paid by the persons applying for such views."

The intention of the legislature to make the petitioners liable for all expenses attending a review or a re review of a road obtained at their request, is manifested by clear, explicit and unambiguous language.

From the time the road laws of this State were moulded into a system by the Act of 6 April, 1802, (Pamphlet Laws 195) to the present time, they have declared that a review of a road shall be at the expense of the parties applying for the same.

In Shafferstown Road, 3 Watts 476, Judge Huston who was a practicing lawyer contemporaneous with the act of 1802, says: "The review is to be granted at the expense of the parties applying for the same." It was held by the Court in that case, that a review could not be granted on the petition of an attorney for the parties interested in the road. "The names of the persons liable," says the Judge, "ought to be of record. The parties dissatisfied should themselves sign a petition for a review."

In Hellertown Road 5 W & S 203, there is a dict of Judge Rogers that a review is a matter of right, and is at the expense of the county. The learned Judge does not however refer to the 54th section of the Act of 1836 above cited. The only questions before the court were whether an alias re review ordered by the court without a petition therefor could be sustained, and whether a report which did not conform to the order should be set aside. The question as to the costs was not before the court as there were no petitioners for the alias re-reviews. Inasmuch therefore, as the dicta above cited is in the very face of the statute, it is not of binding force and must be disregarded.

When a petition is presented for a review or for any subsequent view, and reviewers are appointed, the clerk is thereby substantially directed to make out an order directed to the persons appointed, and if such order comes to the hands of the reviewers, and they obey its commands, they are entitled to recover the compensation allowed by law, although not notified by any of the petitioners. They are not bound to inquire who had taken out the order. It is enough to entitle them to charge the petitioners that the order was issued upon their petition. It is no defence against a claim for the expenses of a review or a re-review that the petitioners were not active in the matter beyond inaugurating the proceedings and procuring the appointment of the viewers. When the proceedings are begun by them, and prosecuted to the end without dissent or objection on their part, it must be conclusively presumed that the services were rendered at their instance.

The county is clearly not liable for the costs in this case, even under the opinion in Hellertown Road. Supra.

The legislature have imposed the costs and expenses of all reviews, and of third or subsequent views upon the petitioners. Under the agreement as to the value of the plaintiff's services and the law, he is entitled to judgment.

And now, May 18th, 1880, judgment for the plaintiff upon the facts agreed upon by the parties for the sum of fourteen dollars and fifty cents and costs.

BY THE COURT.

It should be the aim of every owner of Horses, Cows, &c., to make them as handsome and useful as possible. The German Horse and Cow Powder helps to develop all the powers of the animal. It improves its beauty and increases its usefulness. It makes milk, mucle and fat. By using it a horse will do more work and a cow give more milk and be in better condition with less feed. Sugar Beets at Schenectady.

In the vicinity of Schenectady, N. Y., considerable interest has been awakened in the culture of sugar beets. Dr. Blackwell, the treasurer of the Maine Beet Sugar Company, has contracted to purchase all the beets which may be raised at this point or in the vicinity, at $4 per ton, delivered on the cars at Schenectady before the middle of October, and $3.50 to the first of November. Dr. Blackwell thinks that the bottom lands of the Mohawk river are well suited to beets and closely resemble the best beet lands of Germany. He has made a joint contract with Henry De Forest to put in 100 acres with sugar beets. Mr. De Forest has also 10 acres on his own account. The amounts to be cultivated by different farmers vary from half an acre to 10 acres. If success is attained, there will be a movement next year to start a sugar beet factory at Schenectady. An analysis of sugar beets grown at Kirby Homestead on clay loam soil showed 15.6 per cent. of sugar, with a little over 2 per cent. of impurities in the juice. This is very encouraging, as the per cent. is very high.

Messrs. De Forest an dBlackwell find the broom-corn planting machine is just the thing to put in the beets. They are planting without manure, believing the rich river bottoms to be strong enough to grow rich crops. The freight from Schenectady to Portland, where the factory of the Maine company is located, is $2.10 a ton. Six dollars per ton is the highest price which can be paid and leave any margin for profit to the manufacturer. It is estimated that an average of 20 tons can be grown, with the rows wide enough apart to work with a horse. Mr. John Cantine, a machinist here, in constructing a cultivator with teeth specially formed to run between the beet rows, so as to stir and turn up the ground and not cover up the young plants. Beet culture is a new industry, and is well worth a thorough trial. The pulp, after the sugar has been extracted is excellent food for pigs and cows.—Country Gentleman.

Strongest Man in the World.

SOME MARVELOUS FEATS OF STRENGTH AS EXHIBITED BY A MAN IN RENO, NAVADA.

The strongest man in the world at the present time, so far as is known, now lives in Reno, Washoe county, Nev. A San Francisco Chronicle reporter witnessed the astonishing feats of this remarkable man, and was fully satisfied by what he saw that he is really all that has been claimed for him. His name is Angelo Cardelna, an Italian, aged thirty-eight years; stature, five feet ten inches; weighs, 190 pounds; occupation, laborer; habits, temperate. In personal appearance he is not remarkable; merely a good-natured looking son of Italia, with a broad, heavy face; a noble development of chest and shoulders, and large fleshy hands. His strength was born with him, for he has had no athletic training. When 'stripped to the buff,' however, a marked peculiarity in his spinal column is at once apparent His backbone is, we might say, double jointed, with the vertebral articulations unusually large and prominent. Though he is not a man of unusual size, his spinal column is double the ordinary width, and his other bones and joints seem made on a similar large and generous scale. After some solicitation, he finally consented to favor the reporter with an exhibition of strength, which proved to be such an astonishing exhibition of lifting power as scarcely to be believed. The reporter, whose weight is 150 pounds, stood with one foot on the floor and arms outstretching, his hands being lightly grasped by two friends, one on each side, to preserve the balance of his body The slight assistance, however, had no tendency to raise his body, being merely to keep him from toppling over. Cardela then stooped down and placed the third finger of his right hand under the hollow of the reporter's foot upon which he was balancing, and, with no perceptible effort, raised the reporter to a height of four feet, and deposited him standing, on a table near at hand. This feat he repeated, and then grasped the reporter's ankles with both hands, raised him above his head, and gently lowered him to the table in a sitting posture. Cardela had a pipe in his mouth while lifting, and continued smoking, as much as to say, "Per Baccho, 'tis nothing; a way we have in our country!"

On a former occasion he raised Mr. Lawson, a gentleman connected with the editorial staff of the Reno Gazette, in a similiar way, with one finger, carried him accross the room and lifted him standing on the table. He had also lifted by the same plan, using only his third finger (which seems to be his most reliable one) several Reno heavy weights, one weighing over 200 pounds. He can strike a blow with his fist with a power of 500 pounds measured on a register. It is said that two Irishmen, near Verdi, started in to whip him one night, but concluded to give up the contract as he grasped one in each hand and beat them together until the life was nearly hammered out of them. Many other tales are told of his extraordinary strength, and there can be no doubt that, in his particular specialty, he is unrivaled, and, indeed, a lusus naturæ, when the peculiarities of his physical make-up and his almost limitless power are considered. He states that his father could strike a blow equal in power to 1,000 pounds, so that the strength seems a direct inheritance. Cardela has not much education and an imperfect knowledge of English. He dislikes to show his strength and fails to realize his own value. If he were to give public exhibitions of his wonderful power he would doubtless be recognized and acknowledged to be the most powerful man in the world in certain lines of strength.

The Wine for Consumptives.

Consumptive persons are said to be greatly benefitted by the use of Speer's Port Grape Wine. It seems to give nourishment when everything else fails, and physicians are prescribing it as a rich, nutritious wine. Sold by C. A. Kleim, Bloomsburg, Pa.

Instead of asking the blessing on sitting down at the table, a certain family have for years been following the custom of repeating verses from the Bible, each person repeating one, commencing with the head of the family. A few days since a young man in the family brought to dinner with him a friend who was not aware of the custom, and was ready at all times to get in a word of merriment, when they sat down at the table the young friend was placed next to the head of the family, who began the worship by repeating, "the love of money is the root of all evil." The friend took it that the remark was made to him, and replied by saying, "Well, pass along the root." A sensational all around.

Y., has induced the proprietors of that great medicine, Hop Bitters, to offer $600 to the youngest child that says Hop Bitters plainly, in any language, between May 1, and July 4, 1881. This is a liberal and interesting offer, and everybody and his wife should send two cent stamp to the Hop Bitters M'f'g. Co. Rochester, N. Y., U. S. CATARRH

IS IT CURABLE?

THOSE who have suffered from the various and complicated forms of disease summed by Catarrh, and have tried many physicians and remedies without relief or cure, await the answer to this question with considerable anxiety. And well they may; for no disease that can be mentioned is so universally prevalent and so destructive to health as Catarrh. Bronchitis, Asthma, Coughs, all serious and frequently fatal affections of the lungs follow, in many instances, a case of simple but neglected Catarrh. Other sympathetic affections, such as deafness, impaired eyesight, and loss of sense of smell, may be referred to as minor but nevertheless serious, results of neglected Catarrh, bad enough in themselves, but as nothing compared with the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs likely to follow.

IT CAN BE CURED.

It can be cured. There is no doubt about it. The immortal SANFORD is out a light evidence of what may follow a persistent use of this remedy. The hard, carruous mass in the throat has melted in the nasal passages is removed with a few applications; the ulceration and inflammation subdued and healed; the entire membranous lining of the head are cleansed and purified. Constitutionally its action is that of a powerful purifying agent, destroying in its course through the system the scrofulous poison, the destructive agent in catarrhal disease.

A COMPLICATED CASE.

Gentlemen,—My case is briefly as follows: I have had Catarrh for ten years, each year with increasing severity. For nine years I had not breathed through one nostril. I had droppings in the throat, a very bad cough, asthma so bad as to be obliged to take a remedy for it at night before being able to lie down and sleep, and a constant dull pain in my head. My head was at times so full of catarrhal matter as to injure my sense of hearing and compel me to get up several times in the night to clear it and my throat before I could sleep. Every one of these distressing symptoms has disappeared under the use of not quite three bottles of SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE. My hearing is fully restored. I have no asthmatic symptoms, no cough, no droppings in the throat, no headache, and in every way better than I have been for years. I could feel the effects of the CURE on my appetite, on my kidneys, and, in fact, every part of my system. What has been done in my case is wholly the effect of the RADICAL CURE.

Very respectfully, C. H. LAWRENCE.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 16.

Indorsed by a Prominent Druggist.

THE GREAT MEXICAN REMEDY.

Thousands suffering from Dyspepsia, Habitual Costiveness, Liver and Kidney Complaints, Scrofula and kindred diseases, will hail with delight this new and wonderful discovery, which is a disease conqueror and health restorer, has no equal in modern medicine. The Great Mexican Remedy was first introduced into California in 1879, where in a few months it effected so many wonderful cures as to create a demand for the medicine from Maine to Florida. It is the only medicine in the world compounded from the native plants, roots and herbs of Mexico. It cures all Humors, from the worst Scrofula, to a common blotch, pimple, or eruption, while it clears and beautifies the complexion. In diseases of the Stomach, Blood, Liver and Kidneys it has permanently cured thousands of hopeless cases where all other known remedies had failed. One dose will cure any case of Sick Headache. Two doses will break up any ordinary cough or cold. Persons suffering with Heartburn, Waterbrash, Sour Stomach, Biliousness, Costiveness, Piles, Palpitation of the Heart, Low Spirits, and kindred affections, will find the Mexican Remedy a swift and sure relief. The genuine is placed before the public, under the following name:

Herbaline Bitters the Great Mexican Remedy.
